

About the 2010/11 LPR Class

The Leadership Program of the Rockies is America's premier institute to develop, strengthen, train and equip emerging leaders to reach new heights in public policy and the political process.

LPR identifies and brings together emerging leaders from the legal, economic, business, political, nonprofit and civic professions to learn how visionary, principle-centered leadership can positively impact their community.

How does the LPR work?

The Leadership Program of the Rockies consists of nine full-day sessions, from October of 2010 through June of 2011.

Many of the most recognized and respected experts in the country – including experts on current events, leadership and the political process – lead each session. LPR students are of extremely high caliber and each year's class is limited to 65 students to foster collaborative, participatory learning and to maximize interaction among students and presenters.

Who can apply to the LPR?

Anyone may apply, who is interested in making a difference in his or her community. People who have demonstrated leadership and have the potential to achieve even more! We are seeking motivated, capable men and women from diverse professional backgrounds and from all geographic areas of Colorado.

The criteria for selection in to the program will be an applicant's real world and professional background, a review of their education, as well as involvement in community service activities.

Cost of the LPR

The cost for the 2009-2010 class year has yet to be determined and will be provided at a later date. Students who are selected to participate in the program must agree to full participation in the program. Scholarship opportunities are available to those who may need financial assistance.

Application Process

The Leadership Program of the Rockies will be accepting applications until August 31st, 2010. A selection committee comprised of public policy leaders from all over the state will review all applications. Interviews will be conducted in mid September. The final selections will be announced at the completion of the interview process. We will have a reception honoring the first class the evening of October 8th and the first class will be held on Friday, October 9th.
